Automatix is a self-installing program that transforms your desktop into a fully functional Internet radio. Automatix lets you: have music play automatically when you log on; automatically find and add new programs from the Internet; automatically download music files directly from the Internet; display your favorite songs, artists and albums in their nice graphical interface; have your favorite songs automatically play upon login; and many more... 1. RSS Reader is an RSS reader written in GTK+ 2.0. It's based on the standard GNOME2 codebase and has support for the RSS 0.91 and 0.92 extensions. If you use my text extraction tools (or use any GTK2+ application) you will notice that your text is very similar to the one we displayed in GNOME2. So basically this means that you can store all your blog comments, news items and other things into one

RSS file and later read them in your RSS reader of choice. Remote web cam is a remote web camera software which can display web camera on a remote site (like web chat program) to give a near-to-the-person service. Supports realtime video streaming, video capturing, voice chat and file transfer. Remote web cam can be embedded into any website (powered by JavaScript) or used as a stand-alone application (a very small Java program). It is a client-server application, it only use the open standard Simple Object Access Protocol (SOAP) to talk to the remote server, and also can be use by other application that support SOAP.

Great update! I was never too crazy about the way it looked on my local network, so I've created a custom theme. Click the button below to try it out: Last edited by paulg on Thu Jul 13, 2015 4:43 am, edited 1 time in total. I've had a color cast for a long time on the Menu Bar next to the desktop. I opened up Paint and clicked 'Fill' (black) and 'Flood' (white) and I think that's it. Thanks for all of your help. Great update! I was never too crazy about the way it looked on my local network, so I've created a custom theme. Click the button below to try it out: Thanks for the compliments. You can still use a custom theme, but you can also use the one provided by Eudemonia The ones provided by Eudemonia are great if you want an uncluttered 'Classic Cars' theme. Otherwise, you can also use the default theme
